

About Lendmark Climb to Cure

Lendmark Climb to Cure (C2C) is the signature cause-related initiative of Lendmark Financial Services. Each year, Lendmark employees, their family and friends, and business partners commit to raising money and awareness for pediatric cancer, research, and financial support of families with children and teens battling cancer.

Lendmark launched its first fundraising and awareness effort in 2016, partnering with CURE Childhood Cancer. Originally called Climb to a Million, the company rebranded the initiative to Climb to Cure once the original goal of attaining five million steps and raising $1M was achieved in 2018. To date, Lendmark and its partners have raised nearly $2.5M for CURE Childhood Cancer. Founded in 1996, Lendmark has committed to raising $1M in a single year for the first time to mark the company's 25th anniversary in 2021.

The Inspiration

Lendmark CEO Bobby Aiken has held a close bond with the Madren family for years. At age 13, Chip Madren was diagnosed with Stage IV brain cancer (Metastatic Anaplastic Medulloblastoma) and was given a slim chance of survival. With the help of Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, years of treatments, and the support of loved ones, Chip beat the odds and defeated his cancer!

Inspired by Chip's endurance and the small army of dedicated people and resources who helped, Bobby was motivated to find a way to give back. How could Lendmark make a difference in financially supporting affected families and helping to fund pediatric cancer research?

Bobby had been running stadium steps as a form of exercise for years. Every time he went through this strenuous workout, he thought of the children facing the challenges of cancer. Lendmark Climb to Cure emerged from the idea of using stair climbing as both metaphor and catalyst for change.

“The ‘climb’ portion of Lendmark Climb to Cure is representative of the challenges children battling cancer face -- it's hard, it hurts, and it takes determination to fight through it.”
– Bobby Aiken, CEO

Today, Chip Madren's personal battle and victory over childhood cancer continues to inspire Lendmark employees and partners.
